The Value of Life.

One of the interesting speculations recently started in England has for a subject the present value of life as compared with its value when mankind did not spend half of its time in studying the problem of prolonging life. One of the leading London physicians declares that men were happier and better, and lived nobler lives, before the pursuit of health and the yearnings for longevity became a craze almost amounting to madness, and before the questions what to eat, drink and to avoid, and what to wear, and how to live, by what means to avoid infection, to keep off disease, and to escape death for a few weary and wearied years, were the all-engrossing ones. Another urges that the "survival of the fittest," so far as the race is concerned, is a great mistake; and that humanity in general would be a great deal better off if there were less of the loving labor now expended in prolonging the lives of the weak, diseased and crippled.

There is no danger that either of these views will find general acceptance. The world has become so accustomed to studying the laws of health and long life, and enjoys the study so much, that it is not likely to abandon it, even for the purpose of bringing back the happy days when men didn't care anything about diet and drainage and pure air. There is just as little danger of any retrogression in the matter of caring for the weak and helpless. It may be worse than the race, in one aspect of the case, to prolong lives of suffering and to interfere with the natural process which extinguishes the weaklings in a few generations. But what the race loses in this way it is repaid an hundred-fold in the cultivation and expansion of its finer emotions.—Detroit Free Press.

Doubtful Praise.

The late Archduke Francis Charles of Austria, father of the present Emperor and brother-in-law of the great Napoleon, when Ferdinand made over the crown to him in 1818, declined the honor in favor of his son with these words: "I am a good Viennese citizen, but I would make a bad Emperor." The Archduke had a sharp tongue when occasion demanded. The brilliant but conceited pianist, Leopold von Meyer, once played before him a difficult composition, to the rather too-evident satisfaction of the pianist himself. It was very warm, and Herr von Meyer was somewhat exhausted by his exertions. His heated face and unlimited conceit were too much for the Archduke, and when the artist, with manifest self-complacency, looked to him for praise, Francis Charles sarcastically said: "I have heard Thalberg, and I have listened to Liszt (profound bow from the pianist), and I must say that neither of those eminent artists (here Herr Meyer executed the most obsequious of salutations)—I repeat it, that neither of those famous masters—perspired half as freely as you do."

Put On No Frills.

"We can give you the best of recommendations," said the landlady to the applicant for board, "and we allus requires 'em in return from our lodgers. We're first-class here, high-toned, and none others need apply. Now, if you'll just squint your eye outer that air winder and take a look at them clothes a hangin' on the line in the back yard, you'll see I ain't puttin' on no frills."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Among the attractions of the circuses in Paris is that of putting women in cannons and firing them off. In this country the women do damage enough without being loaded into cannons.

Suicide.

Suicide is a crime under the laws of nearly all civilized countries. This legislation, however, is relatively modern. It used to be considered the correct thing for a man to kill himself if he so desired. The impression that it is wicked did not prevail among the ancients. And, in fact, the Bible says nothing about suicide. The Old Testament and the New Testament alike are dumb, and nothing is found concerning it in the Oriental theologies or in the pagan codes. The old philosophers reduced the matter to a question of opportunism. Cicero thought that "the true wise man ought to pass with pleasure from these shades to celestial brightness" whenever he felt like it; and Seneca said: "If I suffer from disease, I should not kill myself to escape from pain, for that would be an act of cowardice, but if I perceive that my disease is incurable, I should end my life, because the disease would deprive me of all which can render life worth having. It is cowardly to die to escape suffering. It is stupid to live in order to suffer."

Josh Billings' "Trump Cards."

After a man gets to be 38 years old he can't form any new habits much; the best he can do is to steer his old ones.

Enny man who kan swap horses or ketch fish, and not lie about it, iz az plus az men ever git to be in this world.

The sassiest man I ever met iz a hen-pecked husband when he iz away from home.

An enthusiast iz an individual who believes about four times az much az he kan prove, and he kan prove about four times az much az anybodey believes.

Thoze people who are trying to get to heaven on their knees will find out at last that they didn't have a thru ticket.

Too long courtships are not alwuss judicious. The partys often tire out skoreing 'fore the trot begins.

Young men, learn to wait; if you undertake to sett a henn before she iz ready you will lose yor time and confuse the henn besides.

Factories have been established in Rome for the manufacture of ancient relics. Painters have for a long time found it profitable to turn out the works of old masters to order. These are sold to wealthy American pork butchers, who can see no difference between a Murillo and a chromo, except that the chromo is a little brighter and more stylish, and a better match for the parlor furniture.

Mahogany Trees.

The full-grown mahogany tree is one of the monarchs of tropical America. Its vast trunk and massive arms, rising to a lofty height and spreading with graceful sweep over immense spaces, covered with beautiful foliage, bright, glossy, light, airy, clinging so long to the spray as to make it almost evergreen, present a rare combination of loveliness and grandeur. The leaves are very small, delicate and polished like those of the laurel. The flowers are small and white, or greenish yellow. Lumbermen in felling a tree build a platform twelve feet high, and cut it above the platform, thus relinquishing twelve to fifteen feet of the largest part of the tree. Yet some trees have yielded 12,000 superficial feet of lumber, and have sold for $15,000.

THREE little boys, on a Sunday, were stopped on the street by an elderly gentleman, who, perceiving that they had bats and balls with them, asked one of the number this question: "Boy, can you tell me where all naughty boys go to who play ball on Sunday?" "Over back of Johnson's dam!" the youngster replied.

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

THURSDAY EVENING, DEC. 29, 1881.

The State of Georgia has in successful operation fifty-five cotton mills and others are preparing to start. A number of these mills are the largest and most expensive to be found in the South, and they are all paying large profits to their owners. In North Carolina there are fifty-three cotton mills in operation and six others are in progress and nearly completed. In the latter State there are also four or five large woolen mills which have paid large dividends ever since their establishment. The Southern manufacturers are now competing successfully with the oldest and best factories of the Northern States.

Says the New York Sun: There is a disturbance about the manner in which Speaker Keifer has made up the committees of the House of Representatives. Personal meanness appears to be one of the motives governing him in the selection and partisan meanness another. He leaves off conspicuous Republicans because they do not suit him, and he leaves off deserving Democrats because they might interfere with schemes of jobbery which are to be promoted at this session.

As far as possible, these committees seem to be organized by the Speaker first of all in the interest of corruption; and there is reason for the opinion that Secor Robeson has really had more to do with making them up than Keifer himself.

However, all those who are left out may remember that if they are not employed in the committee rooms, they can devote their time to careful preparation for the most important work to be done on the floor of the House and such men as Mr. Whithorne, Mr. Hewitt and Mr. Holman are sure to make themselves felt in the debates and the votes of the House, however ardently the corruptionists and jobbers may desire to suppress them.

But why is it thought of such vital importance to belong to one or another of these committees? And why is it that the managers of big corporations, like the Pacific railroads, for instance, know beforehand the names of those who are to serve on committees affecting their interests, when they are still kept a secret from the members of the House?

Now that the question of female suffrage is to some extent occupying public attention, the subjoined article which we find in an exchange will be read with interest. It appears from this that nearly a century ago when women voted in New Jersey they knew as much of "repeating" and "ballot-box stuffing," as the most experienced election manipulators of the present day. The article is offered as a hard nut for the women suffragists to crack. It is entitled "Female Suffrage in the Olden Times," and is as follows: "It is somewhat singular that the advocates of female suffrage have not given greater prominence to the fact that women voted in New Jersey under the constitution adopted in 1776, and continued to exercise the elective franchise until deprived of it by the legislature in 1807. In consequence of frauds practiced at an election upon the question of locating a bridge across Newark bay, an act was passed limiting the suffrage to free white males, twenty-one years of age and worth $50. In the contest over the Elizabethtown bridge women were charged with changing their dresses and voting twice. By such devices as these the vote of Essex county, which, prior to that time had never exceeded 4,500, was run up to 12,857. The legislature set aside the election and put a statutory construction upon the article of the constitution relating to suffrage, which reduced the voting population nearly one-half. It does not appear that the disfranchised women ever contested the constitutionality of the act."

The entire business part of the town of Durand, Wis., burned on the 27th inst. The origin of the fire is not known, but it is believed to be the work of the friends of Ed. Major W. J. Davis and Captain J. R. Briggs, of Louisville, contribute definite information regarding the confederate treasure. They say $107,000 of the amount was distributed among General Breckinridge's command and that they saw it done. All the bullion on hand was changed with Richmond bankers and the above sum realized. This thoroughly disposes of the charges against ex-President Davis.

Howorth's Double Show Grand Hibernica and Star Company will appear at the opera house next Friday and Saturday evenings, and Saturday afternoon at a matinee. The panorama is entirely new and embraces fresh scenery and many improvements in that line. The company is a large one and in fact is three combinations in one, and includes many well known stars. The Scranton (Pa.) Republican says:

This entertainment, which has exhibited in our city the past two evenings, has drawn the largest houses of the season and better satisfied audiences than were present on these occasions have seldom left the Academy of Music. We have no hesitation in saying this is the best show of the kind, in talent of the company and quality of scenery, that has ever visited Scranton.

On the 27th instant, Lon. Dunn, of Carlisle, aged about nineteen years, boarded Conductor Jos. Thomas' freight train and came to Maysville, on the return trip he acted as brakeman and when the train reached Elizaville was missed from his post at the middle brake. When search was made for him his body was found near Allen's bridge about a mile and a quarter this side of Elizaville. His head was cut, his legs broken and his arms badly mangled showing that after falling he had been dragged some distance by the train. The body was taken to Carlisle and an inquest held. The verdict was that he came to his death "by the bridge striking him and by being run over by the cars." The young man bore a good reputation in the community and was the main support of a widowed mother.

ADAMS VS. SCHWEIKART.

Breach of Promise Case Wherein an Ohio Lass Seeks to Recover $5,000 from a Kentucky Boy.

Sometime during the year 1880, Catharine Adam, a young lady of Brown county, O. came over to Kentucky to visit a married sister whose home is in the West end of this county. While there she became acquainted with a young man of the neighborhood named Lewis Schweikart. He was a frequent visitor at the home of Miss Adam's sister and soon he became smitten with the charms of the fair Catharine, at least we are led to infer as much from the plaintiff's petition which was filed in the office of the clerk of the Mason circuit court on the 17th of December. The petition sets forth that on July 11th 1880, "being then and there unmarried, plaintiff at the special instance and request of the defendant, did agree and promise to marry said defendant and that said defendant then and there undertook and faithfully promised to marry her said plaintiff."

No particular day was fixed for the marriage but it was understood the wedding should take place as soon as the plaintiff had fully recovered her health. Time passed, the plaintiff had recovered her health and notified defendant of the fact but Lewis for some reason or other failed to name the day. On the 17th day of September 1881 he wrote to the plaintiff refusing to marry her and asked to be released from his promise.

The plaintiff in her petition avers that the defendant's intention was to deceive and injure her; that she confided in the promise and undertaking of said defendant to marry her and that she has hitherto remained and still remains an unmarried woman. She states that she has always been and still is ready to fulfill her promise, but the defendant still fails, neglects and refuses to comply with his contract to marry her. She claims she has been damaged in the sum of $5,000 and asks judgment for that amount. Messrs. Coons & Sallee and John L. Whitaker are the attorneys for the plaintiff and Mr. T. C. Campbell for the defendant.

The necessity for general vaccination cannot be too strongly urged. It should be done promptly and without a moment's delay. It is true we have thus far escaped the visitation of small-pox, but there is no certainty the city will continue to enjoy immunity from it. On the contrary the disease may appear here at any moment. The part of wisdom then is to be prepared as far as possible for its coming. A vaccination of everybody in the city, should the disease unfortunately appear here, will greatly diminish its ravages. Let it be done, then, without delay.

Bazar.

The Bazar at Neptune Hall by the Sisters of the Convent of the Visitation, thus far, has been well attended and the interest seems to be increasing each evening. It attracts general attention and is one of the prominent institutions of the Bazar.

The following named young ladies are mentioned as prominent in contributing to the success of the entertainment: Miss Belle Smith, who presides at the fancy goods table and Miss Katie Conway. Both have been most indefatigable workers.

USEFUL HINTS.

A SOLUTION of cyanide of potassium is the best of poison to kill insects of any kind.

HANGING BASKET.—Bore three holes through any pretty shell you chance to have, and put in three red cords to hang it up by. Fill it with wet sand, and arrange ferns, autumn leaves or everlasting flowers in it.

To CLEAN old lamp-burners, wash them in ashes and water and they will come out bright as new. Many times a burner is condemned because the light is poor, when, having clogged up with sediment, the wick is at fault.

SCENT SACHET.—Two pieces of blue or pink satin, three inches square. Sew into a tiny bag, and put in three layers of cotton filled with sachet powder. Sew the open end together, and quill white silk lace around the edge. Paste an embossed floral motto on one or both sides, and you have a pretty addition for a writing desk, glove or handkerchief box.

A SIMPLE FILTER.—A correspondent of the Baltimore Sun thus describes a filter which he says he uses with perfect success for all the water his family requires. It is a gallon glass funnel with a small piece of sponge in the bottom, on which rest half a dozen slender sticks to facilitate the percolation, these being also placed at intervals all around a piece of muslin a foot or two square. The muslin is filled with, say, a pint of closely-powdered charcoal. Through this he filters the water. At first a little of the charcoal passes through, but it soon becomes a perfect filter.

CEMENT FOR RUBBER.—Powdered shellac if softened in ten times its weight of water of ammonia, whereby a transparent mass is obtained, which becomes fluid after keeping some little time without the use of hot water. In three or four weeks the mixture is perfectly liquid, and when applied it will be found to soften the rubber. As soon as the ammonia evaporates the rubber hardens again—it is said quite firmly—and thus becomes impervious to gases and liquids. For cementing sheet rubber, or rubber material in any shape, to metal, glass and other smooth surfaces, the cement is highly recommended.—Scientific American.

A GOOD way to avoid wasting flour each time you use your kneading-board is to brush it carefully off the board into a small sieve; sift out the flour, it will be good to use again. When making the crust for a pot-pie there is danger, as every cook knows, of the crust falling when it is cooked in the kettle with the meat or chicken. If instead of doing this you put the crust on a plate and steam it for three-quarters of an hour, it will not be heavy. Be sure to have plenty of water in the kettle so that you will not have to take the steamer off in order to put more in. Make the crust just as you do baking-powder biscuit. When the meat is cooked and the gravy made, drop the crust into the gravy and leave it there for a minute or two.

ALL fish should be fried in the purest oil. This can be used over and over again by clarification, and, all things considered, oil is quite as economical as lard or dripping. Clean your pan with silver paper, put therein sufficient oil to thoroughly and deeply immerse the fish. Permit this to boil, and it will attain so high a temperature that when a finger of bread is dipped into it and instantly drawn out, the bread has acquired a brown surface, or a piece of white paper dipped into it comes out dry, then—and not until then—your fish, already egg-and-bread crumbed, is launched lightly on the surface of the oil, the boiling power of which will keep it afloat, and then, according to the thickness of the fish, from two to three minutes should be given to it; then turn it gently with flat tongs.

PEOPLE should avoid, as far as possible, being run over by railroad cars. An empty platform car weighs 18,000 pounds; an empty box car, 20,000 pounds; a passenger car, 36,000 pounds, and sometimes more; and an average locomotive, 80,000 pounds. A single pair of car-wheels weighs 500 pounds.
